

A QUNIQUE Internship

Written by Carine El Natour, Marketing and Events Management Trainee at QUNIQUE

Before I began my internship with QUNIQUE, I had learnt to regulate my expectations in terms of internships. My general way of thinking was that internships are not supposed to be enjoyable, they are supposed to be educational, however, it was clear to me from the first day that my time at QUNIQUE would be a combination of both. From my first few hours at QUNIQUE, I felt respected, trusted, and honored as a valuable resource. I was welcomed with a desk plant and a card wishing me good luck on my first day after which I was trained and immediately given tasks that I tackled headfirst.

Within two weeks, it had already felt like I was part of the team for much longer. With QUNIQUE, I have received both constructive criticism and praise, both of which I attribute my happiness within the company to. The constructive criticism has helped me see the errors in my work and has given me guidance towards self-improvement whilst the praise has raised my motivation to come into work every day with a positive attitude and ready to give my all. The company's employee culture is based around mutual success, in which the employees believe that the company's success is reflective of their own. This is how I feel within my role as a Marketing and Events Management Trainee.

Whenever there is a new registration for an event or an increase in social media followers, I take this as a personal win. As a hospitality professional, I was already used to a quick pace of work however QUNIQUE has helped me learn to deliver high-quality results in a timely manner. Despite having joined the team less than three months ago, I already feel like I have achieved more within such a short period of time than I did in my past two internships. The CEOs of QUNIQUE, Angelina and Bassil have created a work atmosphere that pushes you to be your best and strive to be even better. I believe that I will always view QUNIQUE as my first steppingstone into reaching professional success and I look forward to the rest of my journey as part of the team.

To all of my colleagues who are currently searching for internships I would like to say that you should not settle for an internship that does not challenge you. Seek an internship that will shape you to become the person you aim to be in your career. Internships are made to learn from your superiors and to get a foot in the professional world, so make your first step count!
